FOOLISH POLITICS RAPPED BY ADAMS Come

Street Committee Chairman Helps Defeat Resolution for Smooth Paving.

Bids to Be Opened Next Week for Erection of New Free Bridge.

After Chairman Adams had read the riot act on the subject of recommending to the Council "foolish appropriations which the members had no intention of passing, but merely supported for political effect." the Council Committee on Streets last night rejected a proposition to ask $20,000 as a special appropriation for smooth paving on Grove Avenue. A large delegation of Clay Ward citizens appeared asking that the street be paved from Lombardy westward. Fire Commissioner Robert Lecky, spokesman for the delegation, said that the oil dressing used last fall had been worse than useless, the street being now but seven inches of mud and oil.

the street being now but seven inches of mud and oil.

In order to carry into effect the request of the delegation, Mr. Don Leavy moved to recommend a special appropriation of $20,000 for smooth paving Grove Avenue. Planning to overload the proposition, Mr. Lynch offered an amendment adding $20,000 for smooth paving Jefferson Avenue, and then asked that both the amendment and the resolution be rejected. He asserted that, as a matter of fact, the Finance Committee was not going to provide for any smooth paving on Grove Avenue, and that the author of the resolution knew it; that there were other sections needing improvements; that the section of Clay Ward north of Main Street had been favored, and money spent in smooth paving and other luxuries that was appropriated for the curbing and grading of streets in other parts of the ward.

Adams Opposes Resolution.

Chairman Adams left the chair to oppose the resolution and amendment, although the latter was in his ward. He expressed surprise that the Clay Ward delegation should ask for smooth paving when that ward of all others needs money for its streets, many of which are almost impassable. Knowing the needs of that ward, he said he would oppose any such expenditure before the Finance Committee and hefore the Council.

foolish recommendations for improvements which are comparatively not needed, merely because a lot of voters come here and ask for them."

How They Voted.

Mr. Bliley opposed the Jefferson Ward amendment as an effort to defeat the Clay Ward proposition, and told of the condition of Grove Avenue. Mr. Don Leavy thought that smooth paving was economical in the long run, not a luxury, since it gets that much out of the way for years, the gravelled streets having to be constantly repaired. On the roll call the Lynch resolution was rejected, and the Grove Avenue matter also rejected by the following vote: Ayes—Messrs. Billey, Davis, Don Leavy, Jones and Powers, Noes—Messrs, Kain, Lynch, Miller, Moore, Pollock, Sullivan and Adams.

Chairman Adams called a Sented from the Richmond and Henrico Rallway Company, asking the right to string separate trolley wires on the poles of the Virginia Railway and Power Company, wherever joint use of track is contemplated, as on Broad Street, between Fifth and Eleventh, Marshall Street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-fourth, Denny Street, between Williamsburg Avenue and Fifth Street, Fulton, and Louisiana Street, between Williamsburg Avenue and Fifth Street, Fulton, and Louisiana Street, between Williamsburg Avenue and Fifth Street, The Virginia Railway and Power Company protested against such double overhead wiring. The natter was made a special order for a meeting to be called next Thursday night.

that if, as he understood it to be the case, the telephone company and the Western Union Telegraph Company are practically one and the same, and since the Western Union is maintaining poles and wires in the streets of the city in direct defiance of city ordinances, and has defied the city in the courts, he would oppose granting any further privileges or extensions to the Bell Telephone Company until it causes the removal of the poles and wires which now disfigure and endanger Broad Street.

"Whoever drew that law should be ashamed of himself," he asserted. "The tangle with the assessor is worse than with court commissioners." Mr. Policel agreed that it would take from three to five months under the law to get the simplest resolution for grading through, providing there were no objection. He also thought there should be a special fund for damages, and that with such a clumsy law, practically the only way to make any improvement until the next Legislature meets is to limit work to localities where the property owners will sign documents releasing the city from damages. In Fairmount, he stated, the damages. In Fairmount, he stated, the damages had already cost more than damages. In Fairmount, he stated, the damages had already cost more than damages. Last year the Council appropriated $10,000 for grading alleys, of which less than $2,500 was expended, because of fear of having to pay exorbitant damages.

Good Roads Association.

The North Carolina Good Roads Association held an enthusiastic meeting to-night, and after hearing an instructive illustrated lecture on road building by an expert, Mr. Pennybecker, of the Good Roads Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, indorsed the pending measures creating a State highway department, which provide that the State shall bear one-fourth of the expense of permissent road building by the counties.

The delegates to the eighth annual convention of the Interstate Young Men's Christian Association, which met here last night to continue through Sunday, are reaping much benefit from the sessions. This morning the report of the religious work committee was made by R. H. King, secretary, the discussion which followed being led by C. L. Gates, of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. C. Arnold Miller, of Charleston, S. C., delivered an inspiring address on "Three Nameless Heroes," and H. L. Erckmann, of Charleston, spoke on the men and religious campaign. This was followed by the report of the foreign work committee, made by D. L. Probert, executive secretary. The afternoon session was devoted to section conferences on the subjects, "Students," "Railroad Men," "Industrial Men," "Physical Directors" and "City Delegates." These conferences gave an inspiration to the large number of delegates in attendance. A feature of the afternoon session was an address on "The Lord's Need," by Dr. Miller. The program for to-night included addresses by N. C. Schlichter, of Charlotte, and C. L. Gates, of Atlanta. Hon. W. C. Dowd. and, in the second act, she hands it to him in cash. Under his questioning, it she lies, saying that it nad been lend by his rich old aunt, Gretchen Jans (Lizzle McCall). Ward learns that the money had been obtained from Suffern Thorn (William H. Sullivan), a rich man-about-town, and, in the third act, he goes to his wife's bed room and makes her send for Thorn, telling him over the telephone that she is alone, so that when Tiorn appears he may be able to learn whether she has lied in swearing that she had not even made any promises in return for the money. Thorn puts in his appearance, and, in a scene that should have been strong, at the husband becomes convinced that the wife has been silly, not sinful; weak, not wicked, and the curtain goes down on rather an undecided situation. The last act shows the wife become a real woman, working for her living in comparative poverty; the husband finds her, and all's well. The old aunt supplies the comedy element, and a love affair between Ward's brother. Monty (Forrest E. Orr) and France's sister, Clarice (Gwendolyn Piers), forms the only pretty bit in the piece.

Lionel Adams, while he looked the nart, with his graying hair and tired, lined face, was not altogether satisfying. He seemed to lack restraint to some extent; in the heavier scenes he placed his voice in a loud and rather raucous ione, and kept it there, over playing the part. He has a queer trick of raising one eyebrow and drawing down the other that conveys nothing, and an uneasy manner of keeping both hands shoved in his pockets, except when he is actually gesturing.
